If you love college football statistics, you'll love this page.

Since 1937, the year the NCAA began keeping college football statistics on an annual basis one school has dominated both sides of the ball, the University of Oklahoma.

While now through the Bob Stoops' system of moving the ball down the field via the pass; this offense hasn't always been the Sooners' strength.

Through the years, the Sooners have established itself as an offensive juggernaut, winning 24 total titles: 11 in rushing; 9 in scoring and 2 in total offense.

Defensively, the Big 12 perennial power is on ahead of the All-Time Defensive leader, Alabama, 15-14 in total titles.

What are statistics going into to a team title: Offensive, Defensive, Special Teams (Punting, Punt Return and Kickoff Returns). The last category, I dubbed it Vital Stats; as includes Composite Opponents' Winning Percent (or as the NCAA calls it, Toughest Schedule) and Turnover Margin.

- The College Football Team Offensive Statistics Title takes into account each team's rushing yards, passing yards, total yards and scoring.
- The College Football Defensive Statistics Title is established by combining rushing, passing and total yards along with scoring (points given up).
- The College Football Special Teams Statistics Title considers Net Punting Yards; Kick-off Return Yards; and Punt Return Yards.
- The College Football Vital Stats Title takes into account the Toughest Schedule and Turnover Margin

The following charts list the Top 10 Stats teams and also combine the teams that are current members of a conference (regardless when a school joined) and in that way lists which college football conference has the most Team Stats Titles.
